Sin: Politics is RP scourge

By Bernard Llanera

THE PHILIPPINE CHURCH has long been a powerful force in the country's political life. It has often been a voice of conscience, speaking out against corruption and social injustice.

But in recent years, the church has been accused of being too close to the political establishment. Some say it has become a tool of the ruling class, used to silence dissent and maintain the status quo.

Others, however, argue that the church has remained true to its mission, speaking out against the sins of the nation. They say the church's role is not to be a political player, but a moral guide.

As the Philippines moves forward, the church's role in society will continue to be a topic of debate. Will it remain a voice of conscience, or will it become a political tool?

The church's role in society is a complex one. It is a religious institution, but it also has a social and political dimension. It is often called upon to speak out against the sins of the nation, but it is also a part of the social fabric.

Strunk lawyer hits US embassy legal attaché

WASHINGTON—For years, it has been known that the United States has a "policy" of supporting the Philippine government in its efforts to bring justice to the country.

But now, a new twist has been added to the policy, one that is more subtle and more insidious.

The government of the Philippines is now being accused of supporting the United States in its efforts to bring justice to the country.

Killer virus threatens poultry firms

MANILA, Philippines — A deadly virus, known as H5N1, has been detected in several poultry farms across the Philippines, threatening the livelihoods of thousands of farmers. The virus, which is highly contagious and often fatal to birds, has been found in chickens and ducks in various regions. Health officials are urging farmers to take immediate action to prevent the spread of the virus, including isolating infected birds and implementing strict biosecurity measures. The outbreak has caused significant concern among the public and the government, as it poses a potential risk to human health. Poultry is a major source of protein for many Filipinos, and the loss of birds could have severe economic and social impacts. The government is working closely with health and agricultural agencies to contain the virus and provide support to affected farmers. The situation remains tense as officials continue to monitor the spread of the virus and implement control measures.

Legislation
The House of Representatives has passed a bill to strengthen the country's biosecurity measures, aimed at preventing the entry of foreign diseases and pests. The bill, which is now in the Senate, would establish a national biosecurity council and require all imported goods to undergo strict inspection. It also mandates the development of a national biosecurity plan and the implementation of various control measures. The legislation is seen as a crucial step in protecting the Philippines' agricultural and natural resources from foreign threats. It is expected to be signed into law by the President, further enhancing the country's defense against potential biological hazards.

Southern Luzon lures bulk of local tourists

By Ross E. Sison

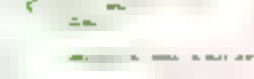

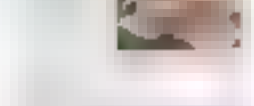

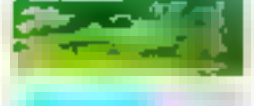

MANILA, Philippines — A recent survey by the Philippine Travel Association (PTA) shows that Southern Luzon is the most popular destination for local tourists, accounting for 40 percent of the total travel volume in the first quarter of 2008. The survey, which covered the period from January to March, found that the region's appeal is largely due to its proximity to major urban centers and its diverse offerings in terms of beaches, mountains, and cultural heritage.

The PTA's findings indicate that the top three destinations for local tourists are the Ilocos region, particularly Ilocos Norte and Ilocos Sur, followed by the Cordillera region and the Bicol region. The survey also revealed that the majority of local tourists are from the Metro Manila area, with a significant portion of them traveling for leisure purposes. The data suggests that the tourism industry in Southern Luzon is well-positioned to attract a steady stream of local visitors, which could lead to increased economic activity and job creation in the region.

Sex for heart patients

It's a common misconception that heart patients should avoid sex. In fact, sex is a healthy activity for most people with heart disease, as long as they are in good health and their doctor approves. Sex is a form of exercise that can help improve heart health. However, it's important to talk to your doctor about any concerns you may have.

Medical professionals advise that heart patients should engage in sex safely. This means avoiding strenuous activities and listening to your body. If you experience any symptoms like chest pain or shortness of breath, stop immediately and seek medical attention. Sex should be a fun and healthy part of your life, not a source of stress.

New way to perk up teaching materials

Teachers are always looking for new and creative ways to engage their students. One new method is using interactive teaching materials. These materials can include digital resources, games, and hands-on activities. By using these materials, teachers can make learning more fun and effective for their students. This approach encourages active participation and helps students better understand the material.
